The Roseburn to Union Canal Path link is a proposed strategic link for cyclists and pedestrians at the western side of Edinburgh city centre.

As landscape and urban design partners within the design team we have been asked to aid the development of an integrated design strategy that both makes the clear connections from A to B and importantly maximise opportunities to re-energise existing outdoor amenity space that exists along the route.

The presented proposals are summarised outcomes of a Feasibility Study completed in September this year and include analysis that considers the existing site constraints and opportunities. Exploration of how best to connect between and into adjacent neighbourhoods and create places for safe and active play, natural greenspace and moments to enjoy a view or new planted landscape have been central to our thinking to date.
